INCREASING THE ARMY.

Gen. Schoffeld, U. S. A., thinks our regular army of 25,000 men is far too small. Gen. Schofield thinks it should be increased to 60,000 at once. Why stop at 80,000, General? Why not make it 500,-000? As the increase of the army is to keep down the riotous unemployed, what better plan could be suggested than to make the unemployed keep themselves down by getting enlisted into the army where they could at least get $13 a month and board.
